THE CHINA MAIL.

HONGKONG, TUESDAY, FEB. 6, 1877.

THE remarks we made recently in regard trade of Formosa by the Chinese are confirmed by our Foochow contemporary. We have already stated that, under the active superintendence of Ting Futai, the administration of the settled districts Keelung coal mines are to be worked by through their lacking importance !the aid of foreign machinery, that coal depôts are to be established, in connection with the mines, at Hongkong and Shang. hai, and that a telegraph line is to be erected to connect Keelung and Taiwanfoo and intermediate places of importance. The Foothow Herald affords the additional information that preparations are reported to be in progress for tendering pro-Atable several extensive petroleum wells, which it is said have been discovered in necessitated by these and other opera- which it has hitherto assumed. tions Mr Tuck Suey has been entrusted by the Provincial Treasurer with the task of raising about Taels 2,000,000 on loan. Like every other treasury in the country, that of Fuhkien seems to be pretty nearly empty. It is said that at the Mamoi Arsenal operations have been partly suspended through went funds. The Chinese authorities no doubt find the building of armour-plated vesfold sels, and the manufacture of engines and implements of war generally, rather expensive luxuries, and probably they would be serving their own interests better by shutting up their arsenals for a time, and devoting their money and attention to the development of the immense resources of the Empire, in much the same manner as Ting Futai is developing those of Formesa. Our contemporary says that one stumbling-block in the way of Ting's operations in Formosa is the opposition of the officials to the changes. These gentlemen have for years enjoyed comparative immunity from interference at head quarters, have been able to "squeeze" and plunder as only Chinese officials can do, and it is not a matter of surprise that these injured innocents should protest against innovations involving a departure from their established practices. A recent number of the Peking Gazette affords us a pretty good idea of the careful manner in which Ting deals with these aggrieved parties. In the usual form of a memorial, a series of charges are preferred against a magistrate of the Kia-i district in Formosa, and it is begged that he may be stripped of his rank and brought to trial. Among the offences imputed to him is, that when one of his police was killed while attempting to extort money in a village where he had gone to serve a summons, our amiable friend proceeded with a force to the place, arrested a number of innocent persons, and refused to release them until certain sums were paid doubtless introducing a little torture to increase the effectiveness of his " squeez-mosa, the most backward portion of Chinese territory, probably, at the present moment, in civilisation, ultimately leads the great Dragon Empire in the path of progress and prosperity. It almost looks as if the Chinese were extending to Formosa western appliances and aids by way of experiment. The Island is to have its mines worked by foreign machinery; other resources it possesses are to be developed after an improved fashion. its chief towns are to be connected by telegraph, and the administration of its affairs is to be regulated by a mian, who, perhaps, pre-eminently of all Chinese officials, approaches our ideas of what an official should be. One great drawback to Formosa, as a place for trade, is no doubt the want of good harbours, and the difficulty of communication between the northern and southern portions by sailing vessels during the monsoons which blow with such violence in the Formosa Channel. In these days of steam, however, the latter drawback loses a great deal of its force. The harbours on the eastern side are unfortunately few and not very accessible or commodious, and those on the opposite side are mere roadsteads in most cases, whilst the north, appears to be a succession of sand banks and shoals. The rivers also are few in number and shallow.

THE Rangoon Daily News is quite indignant about the paragraph, which of Burma with a Krupp gun. Our con- world. temporary has "no hesitation whatever in declaring the whole story from beginning to end an unmitigated falsehood. We published the paragraph, thinking at the time the writer must be endowed with an exceedingly vivid imagination, and no small amount of contempt for truth. It will be recollected that his Majesty was represented as having mounted 24 real guns, including a Krupp, and 300 wooden "dummies" on his "mud parapets." The Krupp cannon was special favourite, and his Majesty was said to have amused himself by sinking boats in the river with it, shelling villages, and firing into the crowd that had collected to watch his interesting proceedings. Unfortunately for the credibility of this story, our Rangoon contempoints out that the walls of Mandalay are built of solid brick and not mud; that there are no "wooden dummies" mounted on them; that the King has not left his palace for three years, and that nothing whatever had been heard of these dreadful occurrences in Burma until the account of them appeared in the Echo. We are also glad disposition and that the religion of which he is a devout professor enjoins the preservation of life and not its sacrifice. We fear we must come to the conclusion to the development of the resources and that these frightful events took place in Fleet Street, in the brain of some writer hard up for a subject.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

In apite of the general cry of dulness of trade in the Colony, the value of landed property seems to fully maintain its value, and this fact may be taken as a sign of the prosperity of the place, notwithstanding the common complaint of bad times. Some few months ago the property known as Rangel's lots was put up for sale, when it was bought by the Government for over $51,000, while the same property was offered and rejected only two years before for something like $32,000. Yesterday (5tb) the ground known as the Bamboo Plantation, in front of the Man Mo Temple, and next to the Central School, was put up at auction in five lots. This land has hitherto been held by a man known as Sung Tepaou, who obsained it from the Government, when this island was first colonized, on a nominal rental of $1 a-year; and this lucky fellow has all along derived over $1,000 annually from bis bargain. As the Government is desirous of re-building the Central School on a larger scale, and as this project will entail a great outlay, it has hit upon the idea of turning this waste of a plantation to a useful purpose by offering it for sale. The prices realized were far beyond expectation, the upset prices for all the lots aggregating no more than $9,000, while the amount fetched was no less than $49,550, being some $40,000 over the official limit. The first lot was bought by Mr Hing Kee for $3,700, who also was the successful bidder for the second lot at $8,750. The third lot fetched the highest price@having been bought by Tung Alook for $15,000. This price is considered excessive, having regard to the nature of the possession, being only a public latrine. There is, however, one thing which places the land in the high estimation of the purchaser. It happens to be situated directly in front of his dwelling, and as he is a stern believer in Fung-shuey, he prefers to sacrifice a sum of money rather than that his domicile should fall under the malign influence of the wind and water. The adjoining lot was also brought by Mr Hing Kes for $10,900. The fifth lot is that directly opposite the the Man Mo Temple, and the Joss House Committee were determined to buy it at any price, as they held that the erection of any buildings in front would militate against the benign influence of the Deities in the Temple over the way. They therefore went so far as to bid whole sea coast, except in the extreme $11,200 for this lot. Altogether the sale was a great success, but this, no doubt, is owing in some measure to local circumstances.

There can be no doubt that war with the Amir of Afghanistan is imminent; and war with that misguided man means a second, and, of course, a far more complete and successful invasion of that province-"the neutral zone of the optimists of the masterly inactivity school of politicians!

We have it on good authority that a force will be prepared shortly for the stern work of completely subduing a people who, despite all friendly advice, warning, and remonstrance, have allowed themselves to be made the " catspaw" of the unscrupulous power bent upon "the subjugation of the human race," and aspiring to "universal Empire." 6th February, 1877. ATTEMPT TO COMMIT FELONY. Mak A-Tü, a chair-coolie in the employ of Dr Adams, was again brought up for tampering with the lock of the iron safe belonging to his employer. Dr Adams stated that he lived at No. 11 Caine Road. and the defendant was one of his chaircoolies, who had been in his service for the last three mouths. About the 25th January last, he had his suspicions excited as to the safe, which he placed in one corner of his bed room, having been tampered with. For several days after that date, he had found some difficulty in turning the key in the Chubb's lock, but as he could not fix any one with the suspicion, he took no notice of it. On the 28th January last he had occasion to open the safe and then locked it. Nothing occurred until 9 p.m. on the 29th, when Mrs Adams had occasion to unlock it, but found she could not do so. The doctor then examined the lock with a light, when it was discovered that a piece of broken iron had been left in the key-hole. Nobody in the house knew that he had made this discovery, as the house had been closed for the night, and all lights were put out. He thought it prudent not to make any stir | ment for the plaintiffs. just then. The defendant and his mate had the additional duty of a house-coolie, in so far that they had to clean the bed-rooms out, and they and a female servant were the only the rooms, and of course the doctor's suspicion fell on the defendant and his comrade. In answer to the Court, the plaintiff stated that the defendant was receiving $125 a month; he was employed in the Harbour Master's Department, being the Officer in charge of the Powder Hulk. He was also one of the boarding officers at the time the note was given. He had left the Colony now and plaintiff had no idea where he had gone to. He left his situation on the 24th of last month. The claim having been established, judgment was given for the plaintiff. The plaintiff said the defendant had some furniture, and he asked the Court to give him power to sell it to satisfy the claim. His Lordship said he could not do that, as there were other claims against the defendant, and they must take priority.

A large number of natives assembled to witness the Mikado's arrival and embarkation, and every post of vantage was availed of for this purpose, but the crowd was most orderly, and, -strange enough it seemed to foreigners-perfectly silent. It is worthy of note that as the Mikado's barge passed the end of the jetty which is opposite to the Naval Yard, a few foreigners who were collected there raised as hearty a cheer as possible, which His Majesty graciously acknowledged by raising his hat and bowing, and leaning forward so that his acknowledgement could be seen from under the awning which covered his barge. Of course the majority of His Majesty's suite appeared in what is considered by foreigners to be full evening dress-but why wear such dress, and, oh |-why wear such shooking bad hats? It is high time that the dress they have adopted is not becoming to them, and that it is quite as requisite for appearances' sake that an ordinary dress cost should be as well-fitting as the most gorgeous uniform. His Majesty's black coated suite presented to-day a marked contrast to the neat uniforms of the Naval and Military officers in attendance, and of the police who kept the road. > with me,—it is £27,0001 There is one point in which I am in discord with the London press, even with those members of it—the Daily Telegraph, Pall whose views on the Turkish question I most frequently concur. They all eagerly deprecate the accusation of defending Turkey against Russia for Turkey's sake, as if would be a crime to do so after the enormities in Roumelia. I won't acquiesce in this. As a matter of fact, England interests herself actively in the affairs of Turkey on account of the geographical position of Constantinople with reference to Nicolaïeff and Port Said; but there would be no impiety in backing Turks against Russians on their lown merits. Pushing the case to the worst, making the Turks responsible for the awful atrocities of Roumelia, yet the butchers of Bulgaria are somewhat better than the torturers of Poland. The Turk in a Darwinian point of view is not quite so near as the Russian to the quadruped. He has a better skull and a better facial angle. Here is sketch of the Russian soldier, drawn by a no means hostile pencil:-" The sea of faces that I watched surging before me! stolid faces, brute faces; flat noses, snub noses, pug noses; wide mouths, high cheek-bones, large ears, large upwards, ears without lobes; broad joints, bull necks, souare shoulders, deep chests; blue or grey eyes, small, even to piggish tininess, and tawny hair and moustache were the rule." I think if we carry the comparison into the morale, that it would be more disadvantageous to the Turk. The Russian proletariat may be simple, contented, orderly, laborious, honest; but so is the Turkish, with the superiority that the Eurle does not pass a quarter of his life more or less drunk. Read Between the Danube and Black Sea by Henry Barkley, a railway engineer who passed fourteen years among Turks, and with all their faults came heartily to love Turks like us: They trust in British goodwill; they are trustworthy, as a people, themselves; and I don't see why we should be ashamed of justifying their trust. enson, and Markham. The F. R. G. Nor in fact was it, strictly speaking, for I presence of the Prince of Wales which had provoked this eruption of whits neokties. His Royal Highness made a short speech, and so did Sir Rutherford Alcock; but otherwise the time was taken up by the reading of three long papers, less interesting than you would suppose, -by Captain Nares on the proceedings of the Alert and the general results of the expedition; by Captain Stephenson regarding the particular fortunes of the Discotery; and by Captain Markham on the various aledging trips; Captain Stephenson had least to say, but said it Captain Narco's pleasant countenance

I met him at dinner at a friend's house. This friend is a character in his way; but I must not stop to talk about him now. My friend, when he told me I should meet a wonderful ventrilequist, said:-"I asked him the first time because he had a letter for me from a common friend at Toronto; but I have had him several times since to exasperate my landlady. thought she would have gone into fits last Friday. You will see how he does it. It is great fun." His landlady turned out to be a tidy, rather stout little woman, but brisk and handy. She was arranging the dinnertable when I came, for my friend has only one sitting-room. In some words which she said, I noticed that she had a rather peculiar voice. The Canadian arrived a few minutes afterwards while she was still in the room, and I fancied she looked at him with anxiety or suspicion. We two were introduced, and then we sat to a very nice little dinnertable. All went on in the ordinary dinnertable groove for some time. I forgot to say that we were sitting in a triangle, at equal distances round a small round table. Suddenly the landlady who was standing just behind me said distinctly :-- "What a lot he eats!" Our host looked up with a well-assumed air of stern astonishment. "I didn't say anything, sir," explained the landlady with a confusion just like that guilt: "Oh!" said our host, as And then he added:-"And so would you eat a lot, Mrs. Barton, if you had had nothing but a glass of sherry from 10 to 7." In India the horrors of death from starvation are but too well known, but the most terrible story here sinks into insignificance when compared with an account given by a missionary of the extremities to which the inhabitants of the Chinese cases have occurred in which Christian small stocks of food are being rapidly exhausted without hope of renewal. The incompetency of the Chinese officials is such that no efforts of any importance are made to alleviate the distress. The natives of London Papers:— India, when famine is at its worst, are so well cared for by the Government that their state may be considered one of comfort in comparison with that of the Chinese after a failure of their usual food supplies.

-Pioneer. Ir is stated that the committee now inquiring into the outbreak of scurvy in the Arctic Expedition have alighted upon the cause. In the Arctic regions, it is Sept. 17, Palestine, from London to Hongsaid, fresh water is obtained by the melting of snow. If used at once the water is tolerably fresh; but if allowed to remain any time in the jars it becomes brackish. It seems that on board the ships of the Expedition the water was allowed to be stored some days, and, Oct. 3, Belle of Oregon, from Cardiff to consequently, before it was all drank it had become tainted. In the use of this water more than in the pork is to be found the real explanation of the outbreak of scurvy. The members of the sledging expedition had, in fact, contracted it before they left the ships, and it is not, therefore, to be ascribed to the absence of lime juice. is a danger which can easily be avoided in future expeditions. Seagoing ships now carry condensing machines, and it be quite easy to subject the melted snow water to a purifying process Some of the leading authorities in Arctic exploration are pressing the Admiralty to send out another expedition, and it is said that most of the officers and men are ready to make another attempt to reach the Pole
